

+
Showbiz
Weekly

LAS VEGAS MAGAZINE

JULY 9, 2006

EIFFEL TOWER
DÉJÀ VIEW

ELTON JOHN PAINTS THE TOWN RED
LAUGH IT UP WITH THE COMEDY CAVALCADE
SHAG WITH A TWIST—PSYCHEDELIC FUN

3MILLION
ON THE HOUSE

SEE DETAILS INSIDE

STEVEN STRIKER

The Ultimate Insider, The VIP's VIP, the Man; take your pick but they all epitomize Steven Striker of Striker VIP. He is the big dog of VIP service and is rejuvenating the class of old-school Vegas.

"Lines don't exist to me," the former professional martial artist said with a smile. "Nothing is ever sold out, nothing is ever impossible. If you want it, and you have the money, I can get it."

Intimidating by stature, not to mention his suit is worth more than my car, the genuineness and pleasant demeanor of a guy with this much juice is almost as startling as his inconceivably expensive watch.

"I treat people right, and that is always returned. I don't think I have ever paid for a dinner in this city."

Dealing with clients such as Eminem, he is the elite lifestyle technician of Vegas, the premier party planner.

"My service isn't for everyone, but if you want the best, you come to Striker."

Finishing up his pilot TV show, nothing seems to be out of reach for the host with the most. To recruit the big guy go to strikervip.com. -JUSTIN JIMENEZ

LIBATIONS

THE BOA FUSION AND BOA 405

The double whammy of these two cocktails lifts mixed drinks to a new level. Both can be had at Boa Steakhouse (The Forum Shops at Caesars). The 405 takes gomme syrup, fresh strawberries, balsamic vinegar, cracked pepper and fresh lemon sour to blend one of the most unique flavors in the city. The Fusion is only served after the mix of juices is aged for 72 hours, infused with Montecristo rum, fresh pineapple, vanilla beans and cinnamon. Cheers. -JJ

